

Caroline Haunted Heritage Tour – July 18, 2010

Haunted Houses, Haunted Woods and Haunted Cemeteries from Federalsburg to Greensboro

Sponsored by the Caroline Office of Tourism and Great Blue Media

Mindie Burgoyne, author of Haunted Eastern Shore: Ghostly Tales from East of the Chesapeake will guide guests on a tour of haunted sites in Caroline County on Sunday, July 18, 2010. The tour will cover over 80 miles and include the haunted properties of Patty Cannon in Reliance, Linchester Mill in Preston, the Riverside Inn in Greensboro, Denton Cemetery, and the Denton jail where people today still claim to see the ghost of Wish Sheppard sauntering through the corridors.

The tour starts and ends in Denton. Guests will first gather at the Caroline Museum of Rural Life where Burgoyne will give a 30 minute presentation about the sites on the tour. Then guests will board a luxury tour bus and follow a trail that includes the Caroline jail (pictured above), the Denton cemetery where the restless ghost of Marshall Price has been known to dance on his “west-facing” grave. Then guests will travel to Willson’s Chance, the house where poor, young Annie Belle Carter fell to her death from a second story porch. Annie has been seen dancing across the lawn from time to time. Then it will be on to Greensboro to hear about the paranormal activity and ghosts that haunt the Riverside Hotel. There may even be a Tarot Card reader present that can perform readings if guests desire. Guests will travel onto the Linchester Mill and visit the woods that were once a path on the Underground Railroad and hear about a haunted house across from the mill property. Then Patty Cannon will be the focus. Guests will see where her house stood, where here grisly tavern of death was situated, and where the bones that cinched her fate were uncovered. Finally, Burgoyne will trace the path of the horrific murder of young Sallie Dean by Marshall Price. Guests will see the wooded area where she was killed and drive past here house, which is said to still be haunted by young Sallie.

AFTER DINNER TOUR: At the tour’s conclusion, guests are invited to an optional after-tour dinner at the Museum, where they can share stories, talk about the tour and ask questions of author MINDIE BURGOYNE. Her best-selling book, Haunted Eastern Shore: Ghostly Tales from East of the Chesapeake: has sold out its first printing in five weeks. Copies of the book will be available for sale and Burgoyne will be there to sign them.
